

RCT - Borgergade 13
DK-1300 Copenhagen K
Phone 3376 0600 - Fax 3376 0510
Email: rct@rct.dk

« Back to 2010

RCT partner Lenin Raghuvanshi receives German award for his aid to "untouchables"

13. December 2010

Lenin Raghuvanshi, an Indian human-rights activist and partner of RCT, was in Germany on Friday to receive an award in the city of Weimar for his long fight on behalf of the dalits, or untouchables.

Lenin Raghuvanshi, founder of the People's Vigilance Committee on Human Rights (PVCHR) in Uttar Pradesh state, also campaigns on behalf of women, children and indigenous peoples and counsels victims of injustice.

Weimar's city council picked him in June as winner of the eastern city's annual human rights prize, worth 2,500 euros (3,300 dollars) and invited him to Germany to receive it in person on 10th of December International Human Rights Day.

In his speech thanking for the award, Raghuvanshi, the 40-year-old doctor, among other things said:

- It is a great and landmark honour for me, my colleagues at the People's Vigilance Committee on Human Rights (PVCHR), partner organizations especially CRY, RCT, SDTT, Indo-German Society of Remscheid to receive the the Human Rights Award of the City of Weimar fighting for the dignity of the poor and "untouchables" of India.

« Back to 2010

Indian receives German award for aid to untouchables

Weimar (Germany), Dec 11 (DPA) Lenin Raghuvanshi, an Indian human-rights activist, is in Germany to receive an award in the city of Weimar for his long fight on behalf of the dalits, or untouchables.

Raghuvanshi, founder of the People's Vigilance Committee on Human Rights (PVCHR) in Uttar Pradesh state, also campaigns on behalf of women, children and indigenous peoples and counsels victims of injustice.

Weimar's city council picked him in June as winner of the eastern city's annual human rights prize, worth 2,500 euros ($3,300) and invited him to Germany to receive it in person on International Human Rights Day.

The citation said Raghuvanshi, a 40-year-old doctor, documented dalits, or members of India's lowest caste, who died of hunger or had been victims of police torture.

Printed from www.mangalorean.com

Print this story

Indian activist to be awarded Weimar's 2010 Human Rights Award

2010-12-27 05:30:00

Dr Lenin Raghuvanshi, a well-known human rights activist from India, will be presented with the '2010 Human Rights Award of the city of Weimar' in Germany on Friday on the occasion of International Human Rights Day.

According to a German Embassy press release, the Weimar Human Rights Award is presented to individuals, groups and organisations who, through their work, promote and support humane dealings and tolerance among and between peoples.

Every citizen, as well as groups and organisations have the right to nominate an individual, a group or organisation for the award until April 30 of each year.

Dr Raghuvanshi will be awarded the prize at the Hochschule f|r Musik Franz Liszt Weimar (Franz Liszt academy of Music).

Weimer city's municipal council has acknowledged Dr Raghuvanshi, founder of People's Vigilance Committee on Human Rights (PVCHR), in his efforts for observation and assertion of fundamental rights of disadvantaged sections of society, such as women, children, dalits and indigenous minorities.

The Friedrich Nauman Foundation for Liberty nominated Dr. Raghuvanshi for the award.

Another successful initiative by Dr Raghuvanshi is his conceptual design of 'people-friendly villages'.

In areas, first and foremost inhabited by dalits, primary schools are set up, offering alternative teaching methods and advocating education for girls. (ANI)

"© 2009 sify.com India Limited. All Rights Reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed."

German Embassy

New Delhi

Deutsche Botschaft

Neu Delhi

German Embassy, New Delhi

India's Lenin Raghuvanshi to be awarded Weimar's 2010 Human Rights Award

Lenin Raghuvanshi with his family (© -)

On 10th December – International Human Rights Day – Dr. Lenin Raghuvanshi from India will be presented with the Friedrich Naumann Foundation for Liberty of the city of Weimar in Germany.

The city municipal council's explanatory statement applauds Dr. Raghuvanshi, founder of People's Vigilance Committee on Human Rights (PVCHR), in his efforts for observation and assertion of fundamental rights of disadvantaged sections of society, such as women, children, Dalits and indigenous minorities. The Friedrich Naumann Foundation for Liberty nominated Dr. Raghuvanshi for the award.

Another successful initiative by Raghuvanshi is his conceptual design of 'people-friendly villages'. In areas, first and foremost inhabited by Dalits, primary schools are set up, offering alternative teaching methods and advocating education for girls.

The Weimar Human Rights Award is presented to individuals, groups and organisations who, through their work, promote and support humane dealings and tolerance among and between peoples.

Every citizen, as well as groups and organisations have the right to nominate an individual, a group or organisation for the award until 30 April of each year. The award includes prize money of 2,500 euros and a work of art donated by the Bauhaus University, Weimar. Raghuvanshi will be awarded the prize on 10th December 2010, at the Hochschule für Musik Franz Liszt Weimar (Franz Liszt academy of Music).

Webresources:

Friedrich Naumann Foundation for Liberty

Friedrich Naumann Foundation for Liberty

© German Information Centre New Delhi