A comprehensive legal framework to eliminate caste discrimination

The draft UN Principles and Guidelines for the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent is a legal framework developed to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent (the UN terminology for caste discrimination).

This soft law instrument is the first to establish principles and guidelines for how state and non-state actors can prevent and address this massive and systematic human rights problem affecting the lives of an estimated 260 million people globally.

Based on existing international human rights principles and obligations, the framework proposes general and special measures to be taken by multiple stakeholders. The UN Principles and Guidelines constitute a strong tool to encourage specific anti-discrimination legislation and relevant policy measures for governments and their agencies, UN and other international agencies, educational institutions, academia, non-governmental organizations and the private sector.

Sub-Commission study on discrimination based on work and descent

The draft UN principles and guidelines are the result of a UN Sub-Commission study on discrimination based on work and descent undertaken in 2004-2007. When the former Commission on Human Rights mandated two Special Rapporteurs with the task of preparing a comprehensive study on this issue in resolution 2005/109, this was the first occasion on which the UN’s leading human rights body sought to address the entrenched form of caste discrimination.

The draft UN principles and guidelines are contained in the final report on the topic of discrimination based on work and descent, which was published by the Human Rights Council on 18 May 2009 (A/HRC/11/CRP.3). The report was prepared by two Special Rapporteurs of the UN Sub-Commission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights pursuant to Sub-Commission resolution 2006/14. The current version is a draft text published by the International Dalit Solidarity Network in September 2009.

Recommendations for further action

Action needs to be taken to ensure follow-up to the comprehensive UN study and adoption of the UN Principles and Guidelines. The International Dalit Solidarity Network recommends member states, national institutions and specialized agencies, international agencies, donors, research institutions, NGOs and other private actors to make immediate use of the UN Principles and Guidelines as a guiding framework for eliminating caste discrimination.

The world’s leading human rights body, the Human Rights Council, is urged to recognise the importance of this instrument as the first comprehensive framework to propose general and specific measures to combat discrimination based on work and descent, and establish a monitoring mechanism to effectively promote and oversee the compliance with this comprehensive framework.

The provisions of the framework should also be integrated into the work of existing human rights bodies, including the Special Procedures, the Universal Periodic Review, and the UN Treaty Bodies.

Preamble

Bearing in mind the commitment to the principles and obligations under the Charter of the United Nations, including the Preamble and Articles 1, 2, 13, 55, and 56, to promote universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recalling that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights proclaims a common standard of achievement for all peoples and nations, to respect for the equal freedom and dignity of all human beings, and their entitlement to the rights and freedoms specified therein without distinction of any kind, including race, colour, sex, language, religion, social origin, birth or other status,

Recalling also the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, which seeks to eliminate discrimination based on race, colour, descent, or national or ethnic origin,

Taking into account General Recommendation 29 of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, which confirms the Committee’s consistent view that the term ‘descent’ in article 1, paragraph 1 of the Convention applies not only to race but also other forms of inherited status and strongly condemns discrimination based on work and descent as a violation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, and the Committee’s concluding observations addressed to States parties to the Convention,

Affirming the condemnation of discrimination in the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action of the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance,

Noting that the World Summit 2005 Outcome emphasized the responsibilities of all States, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations, to respect human rights and fundamental freedoms of all, without distinction of any kind as to race, colour, sex, language or religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status,

Taking into account also International Labour Organization Convention No. 111 concerning Discrimination in Respect of Employment and Occupation, and its accompanying General Recommendation No. 111,

Affirming the UNESCO Convention on Cultural Diversity, and on Discrimination in Education,

Affirming also the principles set forth in the United Nations Global Compact, to the end of eliminating discrimination in respect of employment and occupation,

Highlighting that discrimination based on work and descent exacerbates poverty and constrains progress toward achieving the Millennium Development Goals,

Reaffirming the importance of universal education expressed in the Millennium Development Goals,

Noting with grave concern the persistence of discrimination based on work and descent in many regions as reported by the Special Rapporteurs on Discrimination based on Work and Descent of the Sub-Commission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, and by the Special Rapporteur on Contemporary Forms of Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance of the Human Rights Council,

Aware of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development’s Guidelines on Companies

Taking note of the Kathmandu Dalit Declaration, the Ambedkar Principles, and the Sullivan Principles1,

Commending the efforts of governments to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent through national constitutional and other legislation and other measures,

Respecting and attaching the highest importance to ongoing efforts by affected communities, and international and regional organizations to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent,

Strongly condemning discrimination based on work and descent, including discrimination based on caste and analogous systems of inherited status, as a violation of human rights and international law,

Confirming the need for the concerted efforts of not only States but also regional and international bodies, donors, local authorities, political parties, private sector actors such as companies, schools, social, cultural and religious institutions, other non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and the media in order effectively to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent in their sphere of influence,

Recommends the following principles and guidelines for the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent.
Scope and Application

1 The principles and guidelines concerning discrimination based on work and descent apply equally to all States and to all local, national, sub-regional, regional, and international governmental and non-governmental bodies.

Definition

2 Discrimination based on work and descent is any distinction, exclusion, restriction, or preference based on inherited status such as caste, including present or ancestral occupation, family, community or social origin, name, birth place, place of residence, dialect and accent that has the purpose or effect of nullifying or impairing the recognition, enjoyment, or exercise, on an equal footing, of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the political, economic, social, cultural, or any other field of public life. This type of discrimination is typically associated with the notion of purity and pollution and practices of untouchability, and is deeply rooted in societies and cultures where this discrimination is practiced.

3 Special measures taken for the sole purpose of securing adequate advancement of affected groups and individuals requiring such protection as may be necessary in order to ensure such groups or individuals equal enjoyment or exercise of human rights and fundamental freedoms shall not be deemed discrimination based on work and descent, provided, however, that such measures do not, as a consequence, lead to the maintenance of separate rights for different groups and that they shall not be continued after the objectives for which they were taken have been achieved.

Principles

5 Discrimination based on work and descent and other forms of discrimination are not only human rights violations but also major obstacles to achieving development. Inequalities inevitably diminish development gains and are among root causes of armed conflicts. Ineffective allocation of human resources due to discrimination based on work and descent distorts the labour market and affects the efficiency of an economy.

6 In addressing the problem of discrimination based on work and descent, special care should be taken to address the situation of women, children, the sick or disabled, the aged and people living below the poverty line.

7 All States have a duty to acknowledge the existence of discrimination based on work and descent, to take all necessary constitutional, legislative, administrative, budgetary, judicial and educational measures to eliminate and prevent discrimination based on work and descent in their respective territories and to respect, protect, promote, implement and monitor the human rights of those facing discrimination based on work and descent. All persons of affected communities have the right to enjoy, on an equal footing with others, all civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, including but not limited to:

- The right to physical security and life and the right to be free from violence;
- The right to equal political participation;
- The right to fair access to justice;
- The right to own land;
- The right to equal access to public and social services;
- The right to freedom of religion;
- The right to marriage on free will
- The right to education;
- The right to cultural identity;
- The right to equal opportunity and free choice of employment;
- The right to equal, just and favorable conditions of work;
- The right to be free from forced or bonded labour;
- The right to be free from cruel, inhumane or degrading treatment;
- The right to health;
- The right to adequate food, water, sanitation, clothing and housing;
8 All States have a duty to make sincere efforts to dispel the prejudicial beliefs that constitute, support and reinforce discrimination based on work and descent, including notions of untouchability, pollution and caste superiority or inferiority, as well as to prevent actions taken on the basis of such beliefs.

9 Regional and international bodies, including United Nations bodies and regional inter-governmental bodies, and national and international civil society, including private sector actors such as corporations, schools, hospitals, labour unions, agricultural associations and media practitioners, should provide assistance to efforts toward the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent.

Guidelines

General

10 National and local governments should take all necessary constitutional, legislative, administrative, budgetary and judicial measures, including appropriate forms of affirmative actions and public education programmes, to prevent, prohibit and provide redress for discrimination based on work and descent in both public and private spheres; and ensure that such measures are respected and implemented by all State authorities at all levels.

11 National and local governments should take specific and effective measures to implement laws regarding discrimination based on work and descent including affirmative action.

12 National and local governments should take proper measures to protect affected communities against acts of discrimination and violence, and measures to end impunity for violence against members of affected communities.

13 National and local governments should establish time-bound programmes to enforce the abolition of untouchability and segregation. Legal and judicial mechanisms should be established and enforced including by effectively punishing acts of untouchability. Governments should introduce and apply special measures to address the persistence of social norms of purity and pollution.

14 National and local governments should explicitly prohibit by law discrimination based on work and descent, and explicitly provide for criminal and civil remedies in cases of violation. Criminal and civil sanctions should explicitly apply not only to direct violations but also to complicity or aiding and abetting by other actors, including but not limited to corporations and public officials.

15 National and local governments should repeal all existing laws and regulations that directly or indirectly discriminate on the basis of work and descent, including but not limited to laws restricting voting or land ownership rights based on caste or analogous systems.

16 National and local governments should adopt comprehensive plans of action, including specific budgetary measures and create an office to implement and coordinate such plans of action, for the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent.

17 National human rights institutions and specialized institutions should be given power to specifically address the problems faced by affected communities. Governments of affected countries should ensure that, where they exist, national human rights institutions and specialized commissions can act independently and effectively in protecting the interest of people affected by discrimination based on work and descent by providing adequate financial, statutory and personnel support. Where such institutions and specialized commissions do not exist, they should be established. Governments should, unless better solutions are found, implement the recommendations of specialized commissions, national human rights institutions and other relevant commissions on measures to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent; and intergovernmental agencies, including UN human rights bodies and agencies, should take note of such recommendations and where necessary provide technical assistance in support of their implementation.

18 In order to achieve not only de jure but also de facto equality and non-discrimination for those facing discrimination based on work and descent, national and local governments should take positive measures to improve the conditions of affected communities, such as special measures for the purpose of securing adequate advancement of affected groups and individuals requiring such protection as may be necessary in order to ensure such groups or individuals equal enjoyment or exercise of human rights and fundamental freedoms in education and employment.

19 Governments should ensure that timely reporting is submitted to all relevant United Nations treaty bodies, giving disaggregated data on discrimination based on work and descent.
Survey and research

20 National and local governments should conduct regular surveys and other appropriate research in the social, political, economic, cultural and criminal justice fields, including the attitudes of the general public towards the affected communities, and utilize the resulting data, including disaggregated data for the situation of women, to develop effective measures for the elimination of discrimination based on work and descent. The surveys and research should present information on the situation of those affected by discrimination based on work and descent, and a review of the effectiveness of existing measures and proposals for the elimination of such discrimination. Research institutions and universities should also be encouraged to independently conduct such surveys and research.

Combating segregation

21 National and local governments should ensure access to public places, including community centers, hospitals, schools, places of worship, and water resources, by those from affected communities; take measures to eliminate and prevent segregation in employment, housing and education and to ensure protection from violence against those who cross the boundaries of segregation.

22 National and local governments should introduce and apply special measures to eradicate the persistence of social and cultural stigma of impurity and pollution that de facto precludes marriages between members of affected and non-affected communities and, in some societies, gives rise to violence, collective punishment and social exclusion against couples from different communities.

Physical security and protection against violence

23 National and local governments should prohibit harmful practices of child marriages and dowry, and those forbidding the remarriage of widows, the dedication of girls to temple deities and forced ritualized prostitution and create local law enforcement task forces for the effective implementation of the prohibition.

24 State actors should take special measures, such as devising and implementing comprehensive plans of action and creating a monitoring mechanism, to protect affected communities from physical violence, including torture, sexual violence and extrajudicial killings.

25 Particular attention should be given to the situation of women and girls, including under domestic violence laws, and to sexual violence, sexual exploitation and trafficking committed against women and girls of affected communities.

26 National and local governments should investigate, prosecute and punish perpetrators of all forms of violence and atrocities, and sanction anyone found preventing or discouraging victims from reporting such incidents, including public officials.

27 National and local governments should encourage victims and witnesses to report such acts to the competent authorities and protect them from acts of retaliation and discrimination, and ensure that complaints under relevant acts and other criminal law provisions are properly registered. National and local governments should make public information on the number and nature of complaints registered, the convictions and sentences imposed on perpetrators, and the remedies and assistance provided to victims of such acts.

Access to justice and equal political participation

28 Judicial, legislative, and law enforcement bodies should take specific and concrete measures to ensure equal protection of the law for affected communities.

29 National and local governments should take all necessary steps to ensure equal access to judicial remedies for affected communities, including the provision of legal aid or other kinds of support to public interest organizations representing the interests of those subject to discrimination based on work and descent.

30 State actors, including all bodies of government and public corporations, should adopt specific guidelines, including a scheme of incentives and sanctions, prohibiting discrimination based on work and descent in their internal practices. National and local governments should encourage the recruitment of members of affected communities into law enforcement agencies.

31 Law enforcement officials, including police, judges and prosecutors should be provided with adequate training in the prevention, investigation, and prosecution of cases involving discrimination based on work and descent.
32 National and local governments should take specific measures to ensure equal rights to political participation for affected communities, including rights to participate in public elections, and to equal opportunity to run and be elected to public office.

33 National and local governments should consider the introduction and implementation of a reservation policy to all categories of public service posts, including the judiciary in order to ensure adequate, effective and meaningful, not symbolic, representation at all levels of governments and legislatures and maintain and release statistical data on such representation.

Equal employment opportunity and free choice of occupation

34 National and local governments should enact equality laws that prohibit public and private employer discrimination on the basis of caste or analogous systems, take steps to remove customary constraints on leaving traditional caste-based occupations, and promote gainful alternative employment opportunities and full access to markets for members of affected communities.

35 National and local governments should enact and enforce legislation guaranteeing decent work, a living wage and labour rights for affected communities. National and local governments should ensure the complete eradication of manual scavenging and other unhealthy working conditions, in accordance with international standards.

36 The government should adopt measures to enhance affected communities’ access to the labour market by introducing or extending reservation policies to the public and private sectors, which should effectively counter the impact of market liberalization and globalization.

37 The State and other agencies should secure and support the full exercise of the right of affected communities to free choice of labour and other occupations traditionally withheld from them because of their caste or other kinds of social origin.

Forced, bonded and child labour

38 National and local governments, corporations, labour groups, and international labour, financial, and development organizations should collaborate to ensure concrete mechanisms for the prevention, identification and eradication of exploitative labour arrangements and the implementation of rehabilitation schemes for forced, bonded and child labourers with special attention to affected communities.

Health

39 National and local governments should take all necessary measures to ensure the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, equal access to healthcare and a safe health environment for members of affected communities. Governments should pay special attention to child malnutrition and high maternal mortality rates in affected communities.

40 National, local and international health officials and practitioners should ensure equal treatment for members of affected communities including access to sanitation facilities and medical insurance and treatment at hospitals.

41 Development and financial assistance to ensure adequate hygiene and sanitation should be provided by national and local governments and international development and humanitarian organizations.

Adequate food, water, and housing

42 National and local governments should take all necessary measures to eliminate discriminatory practices that cause affected communities to suffer from inadequate food, water, sanitation, clothing and housing.

43 National governments and local authorities should ensure affected communities due entitlement to land and protect against forced eviction.

44 Governments should ensure that the ministries, district administration and local bodies develop comprehensive mechanisms and programmes for enhancing mandatory and increased access to development programmes and budgets for affected communities.

45 Donor agencies have an obligation to help governments ensure effective outreach in providing food, water and housing to affected communities on an equal footing with other parts of the population.
Education

46 National and local governments should take all necessary measures to ensure equal access to free quality primary and secondary education for children from affected communities, as well as equal opportunity to receive tertiary education. Effective special measures should be enacted for affected communities in admissions to public and private higher education institutions.

47 National and local governments should take effective measures to reduce dropout rates and increase enrolment rates among children of affected communities at all levels of public and private schooling, by providing scholarships or other financial subsidies, combating classroom segregation, harassment and discrimination against pupils of affected communities and ensuring non-discriminatory access to such schemes, including through provision of adequate equipment, staffing and quality of teaching in public schools, as well as adequate means of physical access to schools for children living in dominant caste neighbourhoods and armed conflict areas. Governments should take all necessary measures to remove obstacles, including child labour, which keep children from regular full time education. Governments should also pay particular attention to the need of providing adequate education to children and adults who are unable to read and write because of lack of formal education.

48 National and local governments should review and eliminate language in school textbooks that conveys or encourages stereotypical and prejudicial beliefs, attitudes, and actions against members of affected communities and ensure that the content of education and curricula reflect the contributions of affected communities and emphasize the need to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent through, among other things, inclusion of human rights education.

Public awareness raising and elimination of discriminatory customs

49 National and local governments should take specific measures to raise awareness both among the public and among government officials, teachers, and media practitioners on discrimination based on work and descent, such as through internal training and public campaigns. Areas of attention should include not only the print and broadcasting media but also alternative avenues of information dissemination, such as local oral information through theatre, songs, etc. as well as information via internet.

50 National and local governments should, wherever necessary, review or enact libel, slander, and hate speech laws to explicitly prohibit and punish libellous and slanderous speech or speech inciting discrimination, hatred, or violence based on work and descent.

51 Governments should take special measures to promote due representation in the mass media of affected communities, and carry out sensitization campaigns and awareness raising programme with media representatives. It is recommended that government and other relevant institutions encourage media outlets to profile and publicize abuses faced by descent-affected communities, as well as promoting tolerance and positive examples of combating descent based discrimination.

52 The media, religious, educational and cultural institutions and other parts of civil society, and international organizations should contribute to correcting the spread of negative images of affected communities, and endeavour to build the capacity of those communities, as well as recognize the contributions of affected communities to the development of society.

Multiple discrimination against women

53 National and local governments should collect, analyze and publicly provide disaggregated data on the situation of women affected by discrimination based on work and descent.

54 National and local governments should take into account the situation of women and girls of affected communities in all measures taken to address discrimination based on work and descent, and explicitly create provisions tailored to ensure the rights of women and girls affected by discrimination based on work and descent wherever possible.

Participation of affected communities

55 Any measures taken for the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent should be made on the basis of genuine and informed consultations with affected communities. Procedural mechanisms of those measures should be set up to ensure that the affected communities’ interests are adequately represented.
Humanitarian and development assistance

56 All States should recognize and take measures to address the special problem of increased discrimination based on work and descent in situations of humanitarian crises, such as internal conflicts, wars, or natural disasters.

57 Governments and international organizations should develop measures to tackle exclusion and discrimination in all development and disaster recovery programmes, such as social equity audits and caste analysis frameworks. Appropriate ‘affected community inclusion tools’ should be developed and applied effectively in the planning and monitoring of programmes. Agencies should provide training on discrimination based on work and descent to their staff and should take responsibility to monitor and counter untouchability practices. Members of affected communities should be fully involved in decision-making on and the planning and evaluation of programmes, and agents involved should actively seek to employ members of affected communities in the recovery or development operations.

58 States should investigate all alleged cases in which members of affected communities have been denied assistance or benefits equal to that received by other people, or cases in which they have been discriminated against during the relief, rehabilitation and development processes, and compensate or retroactively grant such benefits to the victims of affected communities.

Market enterprises and financial allocations

59 International financial institutions and private companies should affirm the unacceptability of discrimination based on work and descent within own organizations as well as within the sphere of influence including supplies and business partners with special focus on equal to markets and services and actively to implementing anti-cast laws; and such entities should incorporate caste and gender analyses as well as anti-discrimination policy measures into their corporate social development strategies.

International cooperation

60 International, regional and sub-regional bodies should provide support for the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent, through financial, technical and legal assistance. Inter-governmental bodies, including financial institutions, bilateral donors and diplomatic organizations including embassies, should ensure that the development assistance projects which they support are consistent with efforts to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent. Regional and international human rights institutions and procedures, as well as international civil society, should monitor and support efforts to eliminate discrimination based on work and descent. Humanitarian organizations should recognize affected communities as being at special risk of rights violations and deprivations, and prioritize the distribution of aid accordingly.

61 All international organizations, including United Nations agencies, should pay particular attention to discrimination based on work and descent and seek to prevent and address the multiple forms of human rights violations resulting from this form of discrimination. It is recommended that all agencies include analyses of the situation of affected communities in their country and regional strategies, and develop policies, strategies and instruments to address work and descent based discrimination as well as operational guidance to staff.

Responsibilities of States with diaspora communities

62 Governments of the countries with diaspora communities where discrimination based on work and descent is practiced should take effective measures to prevent such discrimination.

Interpretation

63 These principles and guidelines for the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent shall not be interpreted as limiting, altering, or otherwise prejudicing the rights of individuals recognized under international human rights law, humanitarian law, or immigration and refugee laws.
Notes

1) Kathmandu Dalit Declaration, adopted at the inter- national consultation on Caste-based Discrimination: Establishing Dalit Rights in the Contemporary World: the Role of Governments, the United Nations and the Private Sector, on December 1 2004; the Ambedkar Principles (1992); additional principles on economics and social exclusion formulated to assist all foreign investors in South Asia to address caste discrimination (2005); the Global Sullivan Principles on Social Responsibility (1999).

2) The definition of discrimination based on work and descent is modeled on Article 1.1 of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD). It accordingly supports and encourages consistency with existing international law on the subject of discrimination, and should be read as such. Likewise, paragraph 2 is modeled on Article 1.4 of ICERD and is intended to explicitly allow for the possibility of special measures, such as affirmative action, taken solely for the purpose of and to the extent necessary for the equal enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms of groups and individuals affected by discrimination based on work and descent.

3) In practice, discrimination based on work and descent is usually embedded in a discursive context of religious, moral, or cultural beliefs about the relative worth of a certain group of persons, as well as notions of purity, pollution, and untouchability. While such a context is not necessary for identifying discrimination based on work and descent, its existence should give reason for greater concern that discrimination based on work and descent is taking place. In addition, actors should recognize that in most situations the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent will be impossible with the eradication of the background context of prejudicial beliefs and attitudes, and organize their efforts accordingly.

4) This paragraph reaffirms that discrimination based on work and descent is prohibited by international law. At the most general level, this form of discrimination in the protection and promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms is inconsistent with the fundamental principles of human rights and of the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms of groups and individuals affected by discrimination based on work and descent.

5) The phase “including but not limited to” recognizes that international law affords affected communities a greater range of rights than listed in this paragraph. viz, the full range of human rights and fundamental freedoms now protected by international law. The purpose of the list is to identify areas of particular risk now faced by affected communities, based on sociological research and documentation, summarized, inter alia, in the Progress report of the Special Rapporteurs on the topic of discrimination based on work and descent, A/HRC/Sub.1/58/CPR/2 (2006), Chapter III.

6) These Guidelines articulate specific measures to be taken by states and other actors in order to implement the Principles. They are based on sociological documentation and research on the specific obstacles faced by affected communities as summarized, inter alia, in the Progress report of the Special Rapporteurs on the topic of discrimination based on work and descent, A/HRC/Sub.1/58/CPR/2 (2006). Chapter III.

7) This Guideline emphasizes the need for states, including those which have specific legislation prohibiting discrimination based on work and descent, to ensure that the elimination of such discrimination is not merely formal or in language. While explicit legislation is often necessary and strongly encouraged (see Guidelines 5 and 6), it has not proven sufficient. Assessments of the progress made by countries that explicitly prohibit human rights violations against affected communities have shown that these prohibitions often prove ineffective in the absence of diligent enforcement. The rest of the Guidelines should be read to conform with and support this general Guideline.

8) This guideline draws on concluding observations to governments of caste affected countries by the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, in particular the concluding observations on India CERD/C/IND/CO/19 (2007) paragraph 18. The guidelines 16, 17, 24, 27, 37 and 50 also take some parts of the same document, CERD/C/IND/CO/19 (2007), respectively from paras 15, 26, 17, 23, 25 and 22.

9) The ILO Protection of Wages Convention No.95 guarantees payment in legal tender, cash, fair reasonable, direct, adequate and timely.

10) “With regard to the practice of manual scavenging and the fact the Dalits are usually engaged in this practice due to their social origin...the Committee noted in its previous observation that the Tenth Five-Year Plan (2002-07) refers to a nation-wide programme for the total eradication of manual scavenging by 2007...In this context, the Committee strongly urges the Government to take decisive action. India Observation C.111 of ILO Committee of Experts on Manual Scavenging.

11) Affected communities are likely to suffer high and disproportionate levels of poverty due to discriminatory practices: such barriers and practices should be addressed including by expanding access to adequate sources of income and employment for the affected communities.

In residential areas in which access to food, clothing and housing is typically provided through communal resource arrangements such as village wells and ponds, community grazing grounds, village forests and public roads, national and local governments should monitor and facilitate affected communities’ access to these common resources and ensure that their access is not blocked by prejudicial or punitive measures by other residents.

12) The need for the protection and promotion of the rights of women and girls pursuant to CRC. In addition to the CRC, ILO Convention No. 182 imposes an obligation in particular to prohibit and eliminate certain forms of child labour, including those involving slavery or slavery-like practices (Article 3(a)) and carried out in circumstances likely to harm the health, safety and morals of the child (Article 3(d)). ILO Convention No. 138 provides that no child shall enter the labour market before completing compulsory schooling and, in any case, shall not be less than secondary education at 14 or 15 years of age (Article 2).

13) The objective of the list is to identify areas of particular risk now faced by affected communities, based on sociological research and documentation, summarized, inter alia, in the Progress report of the Special Rapporteurs on the topic of discrimination based on work and descent, A/HRC/Sub.1/58/CPR/2 (2006), Chapter III.

14) This paragraph reaffirms that discrimination based on work and descent is modeled on Article 1.1 of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD). It accordingly supports and encourages consistency with existing international law on the subject of discrimination, and should be read as such. Likewise, paragraph 2 is modeled on Article 1.4 of ICERD and is intended to explicitly allow for the possibility of special measures, such as affirmative action, taken solely for the purpose of and to the extent necessary for the equal enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms of groups and individuals affected by discrimination based on work and descent.

15) In practice, discrimination based on work and descent is usually embedded in a discursive context of religious, moral, or cultural beliefs about the relative worth of a certain group of persons, as well as notions of purity, pollution, and untouchability. While such a context is not necessary for identifying discrimination based on work and descent, its existence should give reason for greater concern that discrimination based on work and descent is taking place. In addition, actors should recognize that in most situations the effective elimination of discrimination based on work and descent will be impossible with the eradication of the background context of prejudicial beliefs and attitudes, and organize their efforts accordingly.

16) This paragraph reaffirms that discrimination based on work and descent is prohibited by international law. At the most general level, this form of discrimination in the protection and promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms is inconsistent with the fundamental principles of human rights and of the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms of groups and individuals affected by discrimination based on work and descent.

17) The phase “including but not limited to” recognizes that international law affords affected communities a greater range of rights than listed in this paragraph. viz, the full range of human rights and fundamental freedoms now protected by international law. The purpose of the list is to identify areas of particular risk now faced by affected communities, based on sociological research and documentation, summarized, inter alia, in the Progress report of the Special Rapporteurs on the topic of discrimination based on work and descent, A/HRC/Sub.1/58/CPR/2 (2006), Chapter III.

18) These Guidelines articulate specific measures to be taken by states and other actors in order to implement the Principles. They are based on sociological documentation and research on the specific obstacles faced by affected communities as summarized, inter alia, in the Progress report of the Special Rapporteurs on the topic of discrimination based on work and descent, A/HRC/Sub.1/58/CPR/2 (2006). Chapter III.

19) This Guideline emphasizes the need for states, including those which have specific legislation prohibiting discrimination based on work and descent, to ensure that the elimination of such discrimination is not merely formal or in language. While explicit legislation is often necessary and strongly encouraged (see Guidelines 5 and 6), it has not proven sufficient. Assessments of the progress made by countries that explicitly prohibit human rights violations against affected communities have shown that these prohibitions often prove ineffective in the absence of diligent enforcement. The rest of the Guidelines should be read to conform with and support this general Guideline.

20) This guideline draws on concluding observations to governments of caste affected countries by the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, in particular the concluding observations on India CERD/C/IND/CO/19 (2007) paragraph 18. The guidelines 16, 17, 24, 27, 37 and 50 also take some parts of the same document, CERD/C/IND/CO/19 (2007), respectively from paras 15, 26, 17, 23, 25 and 22.

21) The ILO Protection of Wages Convention No.95 guarantees payment in legal tender, cash, fair reasonable, direct, adequate and timely.

22) “With regard to the practice of manual scavenging and the fact the Dalits are usually engaged in this practice due to their social origin...the Committee noted in its previous observation that the Tenth Five-Year Plan (2002-07) refers to a nation-wide programme for the total eradication of manual scavenging by 2007...In this context, the Committee strongly urges the Government to take decisive action. India Observation C.111 of ILO Committee of Experts on Manual Scavenging.

23) Affected communities are likely to suffer high and disproportionate levels of poverty due to discriminatory practices: such barriers and practices should be addressed including by expanding access to adequate sources of income and employment for the affected communities.

In residential areas in which access to food, clothing and housing is typically provided through communal resource arrangements such as village wells and ponds, community grazing grounds, village forests and public roads, national and local governments should monitor and facilitate affected communities’ access to these common resources and ensure that their access is not blocked by prejudicial or punitive measures by other residents.
